Internet Evidence in Agency Adjudication

Committee on Adjudication

Proposed Recommendation | December 12, 2019

Proposed Amendments

This document displays manager’s amendments (with no marginal notes) and additional amendments from the Council and Conference members (with sources shown in the margin).

Commented [CMA1]: The Committee on Adjudication voted to change the title of this Recommendation to “Independent Research by Agency Adjudicators in the Internet Age.” The Council expresses its approval of this change in title.

1 A fundamental characteristic of agency adjudications that incorporate a legally required
2 evidentiary hearing is the existence of an exclusive record for decision making.¹ The exclusive 3 record in adjudications regulated by the formal-hearing provisions of the Administrative 4 Procedure Act (APA) consists of the “transcript of testimony and exhibits, together with all 5 papers and requests filed in the proceeding.”² Many other adjudications in which an evidentiary 6 hearing is required by statute, regulation, or executive order, though not governed by those 7 provisions of the APA, also rely on an exclusive record similarly constituted.³ The exclusive 8 record principle seeks to ensure that parties know and can meet the evidence against them; 9 promotes accurate, evidence-based decision making; and facilitates administrative and judicial 10 review.

³ Admin. Conf. of the U.S., Recommendation 2016-4, Evidentiary Hearings Not Required by the Administrative Procedure Act, ¶ 1, 81 Fed. Reg. 94,314 (Dec. 23, 2016). The Conference’s recent recommendations divided adjudications into three categories: those governed by the APA’s formal-hearing provisions (referred to as Type A in the report accompanying Recommendation 2016-4); those that incorporate a legally required evidentiary hearing not regulated by the APA’s formal-hearing provisions (referred to as Type B); and those not subject to a legally required evidentiary hearing (referred to as Type C). This Recommendation addresses only the first two categories, Type A and Type B adjudications. It does not address Type C adjudications.

11 Although an exclusive record consists primarily of materials submitted by the parties to a 12 proceeding, it may be appropriate or beneficial in certain circumstances for adjudicators to use 13 information obtained through their own and their staffs' independent research. An "adjudicator," 14 as used in this Recommendation, means any agency official or employee, acting either 15 individually or collectively, who presides over a legally required evidentiary hearing or provides 16 administrative review following an evidentiary hearing.

17 "Independent research," as used in this Recommendation, refers to an adjudicator's 18 search for, consideration of, or reliance on ~~documentary-factual~~ materials, on his or her own 19 ~~initiative,~~ for purposes of resolving a proceeding pending before the agency⁴, ~~other than (1)~~ 20 ~~materials submitted by a party or an interested member of the public or adduced with a party's~~ 21 ~~participation, or (2) legal research materials traditionally consulted by an agency's adjudicators.~~ 22 ~~Traditional legal research materials may include statutes; agency rules, orders, and notices; and~~ 23 ~~decisions of courts and administrative agencies.~~

24 This definition of independent research encompasses a diverse range of practices. Official 25 notice offers the most familiar use of independent research practice. Official notice, which is the 26 administrative corollary of judicial notice, permits an adjudicator to accept a fact as true without 27 requiring a party to prove the fact through the introduction of evidence.⁵ In appropriate 28 circumstances, an adjudicator may do so on his or her own motion based on information 29 identified through independent research.⁶

30 In addition, independent research is sometimes used, for example, to learn background 31 information in preparation for a hearing, define terms, assess a party's or witness's credibility, 32 determine an expert's qualifications, assess the reliability of an expert's opinion, or interpret or

Commented [CA2]: Proposed Council Amendment #1

⁴ This definition does not include an adjudicator's search for, consideration of, or reliance on materials submitted by a party or an interested member of the public or adduced with a party's participation. Nor does it include the use of legal research materials traditionally consulted by an agency's adjudicators, such as statutes; agency rules, orders, and notices; and decisions of courts and administrative agencies.

33 evaluate existing evidence. The facts identified through independent research may be 34 adjudicative (i.e., “the facts of the particular case”) or legislative (i.e., “those which have 35 relevance to legal reasoning and the lawmaking process”).⁷

36 Congress, courts, agencies, and scholars have long debated the extent to which agency
37 adjudicators may and should conduct independent research.⁸ While some forms of independent 38 research are firmly rooted in longstanding agency practices, others have proven more 39 controversial in certain circumstances. The growth of the internet has amplified this debate in 40 recent years as adjudicators now have quicker and easier access to vastly greater amounts of 41 information.⁹ Information that is now available to adjudicators includes online versions of print 42 publications and public records, as well as newer forms of information such as openly editable 43 encyclopedias, blogs, social media, and personal and professional websites.

44 Although information available on the internet can be just as reliable as information 45 available in print publications, the nature of internet publication can make it more difficult for 46 adjudicators to determine the authenticity and reliability of certain internet information.
47 Moreover, the impermanence of web publication may affect the compilation of an exclusive 48 record for administrative and judicial review.

49 Various sources of law may govern independent research by agency adjudicators.
50 Perhaps the most important is constitutional due process. With regard to official notice, in 51 particular, the Supreme Court has held that an agency must offer parties a reasonable opportunity 52 to rebut an officially noticed fact.¹⁰ Constitutional due process also generally requires that an 53 adjudicator be impartial.¹¹ Whether an act of independent research will affect an adjudicator’s

54 impartiality or raise doubts about the integrity of a proceeding may depend on the specific 55 features of an agency’s adjudicatory program.¹²

56 The APA also governs some aspects of independent research in adjudications conducted 57 according to its formal-hearing provisions. For example, with respect to official notice, the APA 58 provides that “[w]hen an agency decision rests on official notice of a material fact not appearing 59 in the evidence of record, a party is entitled, on timely request, to an opportunity to show the 60 contrary.”¹³ The APA specifies that a party is entitled to “conduct such cross-examination as 61 may be required for a full and true disclosure of the facts.”¹⁴ The APA generally prohibits an 62 employee who presides at the reception of evidence from “consult[ing] a person or party on a 63 fact in issue, unless on notice and opportunity for all parties to participate.”¹⁵ Unless an 64 exception applies, the APA also generally prohibits an employee who participates or advises in 65 the decision or review of a decision from performing an investigative or prosecutorial function in 66 the same or a factually related case.¹⁶

67 Additional legal requirements may derive from agency-specific statutes; agency rules of 68 procedure, practice, and evidence; and agency precedential decisions. Even when independent 69 research would be legally acceptable, policy considerations—such as the need for accuracy, 70 consistency, and administrative efficiency in agency decision making—may counsel in favor of 71 or against its exercise. ~~They include adjudicative best practices such as those that promote~~ 72 ~~accuracy, consistency, and administrative efficiency in agency decision making.~~

73 Because adjudications vary widely in their purpose, scope, complexity, and effects, a 74 categorical approach to independent research across federal adjudications is neither practicable

75 nor desirable. Some adjudications are adversarial; others are non-adversarial. In some contexts, 76 the government brings an action against a private party; in others, a private party petitions the 77 government, or the government resolves a dispute between private or public parties. Some 78 agencies apply the Federal Rules of Evidence; others have developed evidentiary rules to suit
79 their specific need. A few agencies apply the Federal Rules of Evidence, some use it as a guide, 80 and others have developed evidentiary rules to suit their specific need.¹⁷ Adjudicators in some 81 contexts have an affirmative duty to develop the record or assist unrepresented parties;
82 adjudicators in other contexts have no such obligation. Some adjudicators play an active role 83 questioning parties and witnesses and calling experts; others do not. Adjudicators vary in the 84 degree to which they are viewed as subject-matter experts and the extent to which they have 85 access to the expertise of agency policymakers.

Commented [CMA4]: Proposed Amendment from Special Counsel Jeffrey S. Lubbers

86 This Recommendation encourages agencies to develop appropriate policies to address
87 independent research conducted by adjudicators. The policies could take different forms 88 depending on the circumstances. In some circumstances, an agency may consider publishing a 89 legislative rule or a rule of agency organization, procedure, or practice.¹⁸ In other circumstances, 90 an agency guidance document, including an interpretative-interpretive rule or general statement
91 of policy within the meaning of the APA, may be suitable.¹⁹ An agency may intend for its policy
92 to confer an important procedural right on private parties and bind the agency.²⁰ Alternatively, it 93 may intend for its policy only to facilitate internal agency processes and not bind the agency 94 except, perhaps, in cases in which noncompliance results in substantial prejudice to a private 119 sources. Examples of such indicia include:

- 120 a. Whether the information was authored by an identifiable and easily authenticated 121 institutional or individual author who is considered an expert or reputable 122 authority on the subject;
 - 123 ~~b. Whether the author published the information for a purely informational or~~ 124 ~~scholarly purpose (i.e., not for a commercial, partisan, or promotional purpose);~~
 - 125 ~~e.b.~~ Whether the information references other authorities that help to corroborate its 126 accuracy;
 - 127 ~~d.c.~~ Whether the meaning and significance of the information is clear;
 - 128 ~~e.d.~~ Whether the information is published in a final format rather than as a draft or in a 129 publicly editable format;
 - 130 ~~f.e.~~ Whether the information is current;
 - 131 ~~g.f.~~ Whether the owner or administrator of the website on which the information 132 appears is easily authenticated, ~~and~~ is a recognized authority or resource, ~~and~~ 133 ~~maintains the website for a purely informational or scholarly purpose (i.e., not for~~ 134 ~~a commercial, partisan, or promotional purpose);~~
 - 135 ~~h.g.~~ Whether information that appears on the website ~~or in the publication~~ undergoes 136 editorial or peer review; and
 - 137 ~~i.h.~~ Whether other reliable resources contain the same information or cite ~~to~~ the 138 original information as reliable or authoritative.
- 139 If agencies have identified sources or categories of sources that they determine are not 140 appropriate for adjudicators to independently consult, they should publicly designate 141 those sources or categories of sources.
- 142 4. Agencies should promulgate rules on official notice that specify the procedures that 143 adjudicators must follow when an agency decision rests on official notice of a material 144 fact. The rules should ensure that parties, upon timely request, are provided a reasonable 145 opportunity to rebut the fact; rebut an inference drawn from the fact; and supplement, 146 explain, or give different perspective to the fact. The precise nature and timing of an

- 147 opportunity for rebuttal may depend on factors such as whether a fact is general or 148 specific to the parties, whether a factual finding or an inference drawn from a fact is or is 149 not subject to reasonable dispute-is reasonably disputable or indisputable, whether a fact 150 is central or peripheral to the adjudication, and whether a fact is noticed for the first time 151 before or at a hearing or in an initial or appellate decision.
- 152 5. If agencies intend that specific procedures will apply when adjudicators use 153 independently obtained information for purposes other than official notice of a material 154 fact, such as for background purposes, they should clarify the distinction between official 155 notice and other uses of information independently obtained by an adjudicator and 156 describe the applicable procedures, if any. In particular, agencies should consider 157 distinguishing, as appropriate, use of traditional legal research materials from factual 158 research; and material facts from facts that are not material, such as background facts.
- 159 6. Agency policies should specify when adjudicators must physically or electronically put 160 independently obtained materials, especially internet materials, in an administrative 161 record and explain what procedures adjudicators should follow to do so to ensure they 162 preserve materials in a stable, permanent form. Agencies should ensure that such policies 163 are consistent with other agency rules of procedure.
- 164 7. Agencies should identify those policies which-that are intended to confer an important 165 procedural right on private parties, noncompliance with which may give rise to grounds 166 for administrative or judicial review, and those which-that do not and are intended only to 167 facilitate internal agency processes.
- 168 8. When adjudicators conduct independent research using sources that are not available to 169 parties on or through an agency website, they should make those sources available to the 170 parties by alternative means.
- 171 9. Agencies or agency adjudicators, as appropriate, should take steps to ensure that 172 adjudicative staff are aware of agency policies on independent research, particularly with 173 respect to independent internet research.
