

Remand Without Vacatur

Committee on Judicial Review

Proposed Recommendation | Dec. 5-6, 2013

1 Remand without vacatur is a judicial remedy that permits agency orders or rules to 2 remain in effect after they are remanded by the reviewing court for further agency
3 proceedings. Traditionally, courts have reversed and set aside agency actions they have found 4 to be arbitrary and capricious, unlawful, unsupported by substantial evidence, or otherwise in 5 violation of an applicable standard of review. Since 1970, however, the remedy of remanding
6 without vacating the agency decision has been employed with increasing frequency. It has now 7 been applied in more than seventy decisions of the Court of Appeals for the District of 8 Columbia Circuit involving over twenty federal agencies and encompassing a variety of 9 substantive areas of law including air pollution control, telecommunications, and national 10 security.¹

11 The Administrative Conference conducted a study of remand without vacatur that 12 examined existing scholarship on the remedy as well as its application by courts in recent years.
13 These recommendations and the supporting Report examine the legality and application of 14 remand without vacatur in cases involving judicial review of agency actions. The Conference
15 accepts the principle that remand without vacatur is a valid equitable remedial device. It 16 recognizes and approves of at least three general circumstances in which remand without 17 vacatur may be appropriate. Finally, it offers advice to courts that are considering employing 18 the remedy and to agencies responding to remands.

¹ Stephanie J. Tatham, The Unusual Remedy of Remand Without Vacatur, Appendix A (Report to the Administrative Conference of the United States, Nov. 14, 2013) [hereinafter Tatham Report]. It has also been applied on review of agency action in the Courts of Appeals for the Federal, First, Third, Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, and Tenth Circuits. Id. at 26-28.

19 The remedy has generated academic and judicial debate over its advisability and 20 legality. Those who support remand without vacatur point to the benefits that accrue in a 21 variety of situations, such as when application of the device enhances stability in the regulatory 22 regime or in regulated markets, protects reliance interests, prevents regulatory gaps, allows the 23 government to continue collecting fees or processing reimbursements, and ensures continued 24 provision of public benefits (including the benefits of regulation). Remand without vacatur has 25 also been said to be appropriate because it defers to the institutional competence of agencies 26 and may reduce agency burdens on remand.

27 Nonetheless, remand without vacatur is not without controversy. Some scholars argue 28 that it can deprive litigants of relief from unlawful or inadequately reasoned agency decisions, 29 reduce incentives to challenge improper or poorly reasoned agency behavior, promote judicial 30 activism, and allow deviation from legislative directives. Critics have also suggested that it 31 reduces pressure on agencies to comply with APA obligations and to respond to a judicial 32 remand. Given the relative infrequency of application of the remedy, these prudential and 33 theoretical concerns, while possible, do not appear to cause systemic problems.

34 Some judges argue that remand without vacatur contravenes the plain language of the 35 judicial review provisions of the APA.² However, despite occasional dissents or other separate 36 judicial opinions, no cases were identified in which a federal court of appeals held that remand 37 without vacatur was unlawful under the APA or another statutory standard of review. Rather, 38 courts generally accept the remedy as a lawful exercise of equitable remedial discretion.³

39 The Conference recommends that the remedy continue to be considered a valid
40 exercise of judicial authority on review of cases that arise under the Administrative Procedure 41 Act, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2), as well as under other statutory review provisions, unless they contain an 42 express legislative directive to the contrary. In employing remand without vacatur, courts are 43 essentially finding that agency errors that are sufficient to require remand may not always 44 justify immediately setting aside the challenged action. Since this conclusion deviates from 45 customary remedial norms, when courts invoke the remedy, they should explain their reasons 46 for doing so.

47 Equitable considerations that justify leaving the challenged agency action in place on 48 remand may exist in a variety of circumstances. Longstanding judicial precedent in the D.C.
49 Circuit supports application of the remedy after a finding that a challenged agency action, while 50 invalid, is not seriously deficient or when vacatur would have disruptive consequences.⁴ Courts 51 also employ the remedy when vacatur would not serve the interests of the prevailing party that 52 was harmed by the agency’s error.⁵ Remand without vacatur may be appropriate in these 53 circumstances as well as in others not considered here.

54 When a reviewing court has decided to remand an agency’s action, it should consider 55 asking the parties for their views on the appropriate remedy in light of this decision.⁶ In its final

⁴ E.g., N. Air Cargo v. U.S. Postal Service, 674 F.3d 852, 860-61 (D.C. Cir. 2012); Allied-Signal, Inc. v. NRC, 988 F.2d 146, 150-51 (D.C. Cir. 1993).

56 decision, the court should identify whether or not it is vacating the remanded agency action.
57 Research indicates that ambiguous remand orders that do not clearly identify whether an 58 agency’s action is also vacated occur with some regularity.⁷ This is particularly problematic 59 where an agency rule or order regulates conduct of, or permits enforcement actions against, 60 individuals or entities not party to the litigation, and who cannot seek direct clarification of the 61 court’s remedial intention.

62 Remand without vacatur does not by itself provide relief for litigants after successful 63 challenges to agency rules or orders. Thus, responsive agency action on remand is a matter of 64 particular concern in such cases.⁸ Moreover, difficulties in identifying remanded decisions and 65 agency responses can hinder oversight. Accordingly, agencies should identify or post final 66 judicial opinions vacating, or remanding without vacatur, agency rules or orders in the 67 applicable online public docket, if any exists, and on agency websites, where appropriate.
68 Agencies should include a short statement identifying the judicial opinion and whether it 69 vacates all or part of the challenged rule or order, together with any unique identifiers for the 70 affected agency rule or order (such as a Regulation Identifier Number). Agencies should 71 additionally contact the Office of the Federal Register and issue a rule removing vacated 72 regulations from the Code of Federal Regulations.⁹

v. OSHA, 938 F.2d 1310, 1325-26 (D.C. Cir. 1991). Courts might also consider soliciting the views of the parties at oral argument.

⁷ E.g., PSEG Energy Res. & Trade, LLC v. FERC, 665 F.3d 203 (D.C. Cir. 2011); Am. Radio Relay League, Inc. v. FCC, 524 F.3d 227 (D.C. Cir. 2008).

⁸ Courts have occasionally retained jurisdiction over cases remanded without vacatur to ensure responsive agency action. E.g., Nat’l Ass’n of Regulatory Util. Comm’rs v. DOE, 680 F.3d 819, 820 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (directing compliance within six months and retaining jurisdiction “so that any further review would be expedited”). Courts may also ask agencies to report on their progress on remand. E.g., Chamber of Commerce v. SEC, 443 F.3d 890, 909 (D.C. Cir. 2006) (staying the court’s mandate that would vacate the remanded agency action until further order of the court and requiring the SEC to file a status report within 90 days).

73 To further public awareness, the Conference also recommends that agencies provide 74 information in the Unified Agenda of Federal Regulatory and Deregulatory Actions regarding 75 their future plans with respect to rules that are remanded without vacatur. In any subsequent 76 proceedings responding to remand without vacatur, agencies should identify the initial agency 77 action together with any unique identifier, as well as the remanding judicial opinion.

RECOMMENDATION

78 Validity of the Remedy

79 1. Remand without vacatur should continue to be considered a valid equitable 80 remedy on review of cases that arise under the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) and its 81 judicial review provision, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2).

82 2. Absent an express legislative directive to the contrary in any other statute 83 providing the basis for review, remand without vacatur should be considered a valid remedial 84 approach by federal courts reviewing challenges to agency action pursuant to such a statute.

85 Recommendations to Courts

86 3. On review of agency action, reviewing courts should identify in their judicial 87 opinions or orders whether or not they are vacating a remanded agency action.

88 4. When courts remand but do not vacate an agency action, they should explain 89 the basis for their remedial choice.

90 5. In determining whether the remedy of remand without vacatur is appropriate, 91 courts should consider equitable factors, including whether:

expired codified regulations in the Federal Register. See, e.g., Electronic On-Board Recorders for Hours-of-Service Compliance; Removal of Final Rule Vacated by Court 72 Fed. Reg. 28,447 (May 14, 2012).

92 (a) correction is reasonably achievable in light of the nature of the deficiencies in 93 the agency's rule or order;

94 (b) the consequences of vacatur would be disruptive; or

95 (c) the interests of the parties who prevailed against the agency in the litigation 96 would be served by allowing the agency action to remain in place.

97 6. When a court has decided to remand an agency action, it should consider asking 98 the parties for their views on whether to vacate the agency action and on any related remedial 99 issues.

100 Recommendations to Agencies

101 7. Agencies should specifically identify or post judicial decisions vacating or 102 remanding without vacatur agency rules or orders in any applicable public docket, and, if 103 appropriate, on the agency website. When a court remands but does not vacate an agency's 104 rule or order, the agency should include a statement explicitly advising that the rule or order 105 has not been vacated and is still in effect despite the remand.

106 8. When a regulation has been vacated, the promulgating agency should work with 107 the Office of the Federal Register to remove the vacated regulation from the Code of Federal 108 Regulations.

109 9. Agencies should provide information in the Unified Agenda of Federal Regulatory 110 and Deregulatory Actions regarding their plans with respect to rules that are remanded without 111 vacatur.

112 10. In responding to a judicial remand without vacatur of an agency action, agencies 113 should identify the initial agency action as well as the remanding judicial opinion.
