Hello,

My name is Martin K. Nguyen. I'm a "small" inventor. I believe many independent US inventors like me are greatly concerned about how our intellectual properties are protected here at least in our own country, the USA. Whenever a patent or patents from an independent inventor or from his/her small business entities got invalidated, I'm discouraged and hopeless. Nowadays, the USPTO is thinking about having a "small claims court" program sounds like a good idea, however, we can do a little more than that by forming a group of "legal experts", who don't need to be patent attorneys, who would be paid or compensated by the US government, and this group would represent for independent inventors, or even acting as referees between the plaintiffs and the defendants.

Thank you!

Martin Nguyen
